This gripping, action-packed novel tells the story of eighteen-year-old Jamin of Daniel's bar, a fierce, hot-headed young man who tended to rethink his father's death by forcing the Romans from his land of Israel. Daniel's palpable hatred of the Romans will only diminish when he begins to hear the gentle lessons of Jesus of Nazareth, a nomadic carpenter. Fast, fast, suspense, vividly forged story of friendship, loyalty, home idea, community... and finally, as Jesus says to Daniel on page 224: Can not you see, Daniel, it is anger that is the enemy? Not men. Hate doesn't die of killing. It only comes up a hundred times. The only thing stronger than hate is love. Powerful, appropriate to read turbulent times. After witnessing his father's crucifixion of Roman soldiers, Daniel bar Jamin being fired with one passion: to avenge his father's death by driving the Roman legions from the land of Israel. Gripped by anger, Daniel joins brutal raids by a prohibitive band living in the mountains outside his village. Although her grandmother's death slows down her plans, forcing her to return home to care for her sister, she continues her dangerous life, leading a group of boy guerrillas spying and plotting, anxiously awaiting revenge. In nearby Capernaum, the rabbi teaches a different lesson. Over and over again pulls the teachings of Jesus of Nazareth, only to be turned away, frustrated and confused by Jesus' inaction by the opposing Romans. Without tenderness and forgiveness, the prime minister Daniel is also careless about the loyalty of his friend Joel; The love of Joel's sister, Malthace; and the needs of his own disturbed sister Leah, who will drag them down their destructive path towards disaster. Elizabeth George Speare won the 1962 Newbery Medal for his excellent novel Daniel's tortured journey to the blind, limiting the anger of his acceptance and understanding of love. The booklist called it a dramatic, deeply felt narrative whose characters and message have long been in the mind. - Inside the front cover.
